THE ART OF PRINTMAKING

Original printmaking, in all its exceptional diversity, has always attracted artists of outstanding skill and reputation. The quality of draughtsmanship, expressive techniques, power and beauty of much printmaking, plus the relatively modest cost of original prints, offer an opportunity to buy work by some of our finest artists.

An original print is an impression made by contact with an inked screen, block or plate such as stone, wood, glass, metal or lino. What is produced is not a reproduction but an original work of art, usually forming part of an edition, in which each print is signed and numbered by the artist.

The general requirements for an original print are:

- i) The artist alone has created the master image
- ii) The print is made by the artist or according to the artist's directions.
- iii) The finished print is approved by the artist

Photographic reproductions of prints, drawings and paintings are often confused with original prints. They are often good reproductions, on fine art paper, but they are not original prints.

The difference in price commanded by an original print and a reproduction is a reflection of their differences and their aesthetic integrity.

Original prints offer an opportunity to buy work by some of our finest artists at affordable prices.
